ANDERSONVILLE, ETC.

I informed Mr. Davis that the people of the North held him, as representing the Confederacy, largely responsible for the sufferings and deaths of our prisoners at Andersonville, Libby, and other places. He replied that nothing in connection with the war gave him more pain that such statements should be retailed about. Without going into any defense in extense, he stated that he believed there was a Providence and a just God who righted everything, and that the whole matter would shortly be ventilated. I asked him how, and in really he said that the records of would shortly be ventilated. I asked him how, and in reply he said that the records o Andersonville, etc., had been providentially preserved and would shortly be made public "You will then see," says Mr. Davis, "who Is and who is not responsible for lives and sufferings." I told him it would be little say isfaction to our own people to have saddled on them that which was at the present time resting on and blistered into the people of the South. He again replied that the whole history would in a short time become public property, and that then judgment could be formed, and the responsibility fastened,

The facts of the case as leveloped by the evidence are, that there are two Miss Tylers, living in adjoining premises on East 13th street. On Friday last, a letter was tell at No. 38 East 13th street, the house in which one of the Misses Tyler resides. It is considered that the cost and in the letter was passed into the room occupied by the defendant; she asked "Is it for me?" and was answered in the afternative; she then opened it and, discovering that it was intended for the other Miss Tyler, she placed it in the hands of Mr. Tyler to be delivered to its proper owner. The letter appears to have been indicted by a gentleman in Albany, and contained some matters which Miss Tyler No. 2 did not wish either Miss Tyler No. 1 or Mr. Tyler to pry into. She therefore caused the arrest of Miss T. No. 1 on a charge of puriohing letters from the P. O. The chief witness for the defence was Anna Davis, who resides at 39 East 18th street, and who received the letter and handed it to the defendant. Witness does not know Mr. Tyler, but believes he knows both of the ladles who bear his name. The Commissioner, deeming the cyidence insufficient to establish a criminal intent, discharged the defendant from arrest.

The principal advantage held out to parents is the thorough knowledge which Mr. PILEURY and his two some possess of the English and German languages, from their long residence in England and Germany.
